DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-3 and 27-28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Roos (US 5,699,276) in view of Johnson (US 6,169,979).

Roos teaches a method and system for providing an interface between a digital network and home electronics, comprising:

As per claims 1-4 and 27-28,

Yablonski, cl. 1, (g)

a power management means for detecting that a user is utilizing an appliance and for measuring the amount of power consumed by said appliance (column 4, line 1 – column 5, line 67; column 7, lines 2-62); <sup>16-32</sup>

a fee charging means for charging a lower or higher fees for said measured amount of power consumed (~~column 4, line 1 – column 5, line 67; column 7, lines 2-62~~); <sup>27-31</sup>

Roos does not teach for purchasing the appliance at a special price, wherein a part of the fee paid is allocated to the manufacturer that has sold said appliance.

Johnson teaches a method and system for a computer-assisted sales system for utilities, wherein rebates are provided for purchasing or installation more energy efficient equipment and various fees are charged for power consumed (column 2, lines 49-51; column 5, lines 1-24).

Art Unit: 3629

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Roos to include purchasing the appliance at a special price, because it would allow a customer to reduce the energy consumption and utility cost.

Claims 5-10, 12-23, 25-26 and 29 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Roos and Johnson in view of Yablonowski et al. (US 6,535,859).

As per claims 5-10, Roos and Johnson teach all the limitations of claims 5-10, except that the additional fee is determined based on information concerning the degree of energy savings resulted from using said appliance.

Yablonowski et al. teach a method and system for charging a fee to an end user, wherein a power saving device is retrofitted into a user's facility, and the fee is determined as a function of a difference between the original power consumption and the new power consumption (column 7, line 2 – column 8, line 65).

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Roos and Johnson to include that the additional fee is determined based on information concerning the degree of energy savings resulted from using said appliance, because it would stimulate a customer to reduce the energy consumption and utility cost.

As per claims 12-21, Yablonowski et al. teach said method and system, comprising a power management means for detecting that a user is utilizing said mode selectable apparatus in said special price mode (column 9, lines 6-17).

As per claim 22, Roos teaches said method and system, comprising a display means installed in the home of said user, which receives said measurement information prepared by said automatic measurement means and which displays the fee (column 5, lines 30-43).

As per claims 23 and 25-26, Roos teaches said method and system, comprising a human body detection means for detecting whether or not a human body is present and a security means for giving notification in order for crime prevention or for disaster prevention based on said detection result (column 9, lines 17-27).

Also, as per claims 23 and 25-26, Yablonowski et al. teach said method and system, comprising an energy saving control means for energy saving control based on human body detection (column 6, lines 35-45).

As per claim 29, Yablonowski et al. teach said method and system, comprising: providing a portion of the calculated fee charged to the user to an installer of the power measurement unit (column 7, lines 2 – column 8, line 65).

Claim 30 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Roos and Johnson in view of Hart et al. (US 4,858,141).

As per claim 30, Roos and Johnson teach all the limitations of claim 30, except that measuring the value of the electric power consumed by said appliance is conducted separately from power consumed by other appliances.

Hart et al. teach a method and system for non-intrusive appliance monitoring apparatus, wherein the power consumption of each of a plurality of appliances is monitored separately from other appliances (column 2, lines 15-17).

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Roos and Johnson to include separately measuring the value of the electric power consumed by said appliance, because it would allow to monitor and demonstrate the savings of power usage by new appliance, thereby convincing the purchaser to upgrade remaining appliances.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-10 and 11-30 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure (see form PTO-892).
